

CANADA

1. Canadian Embassy and Support of Canadian Studies in the United States – Over the past twenty-five years, the Canadian Embassy has helped foster the development of Canadian Studies in the United States. Through the Canadian Studies Grant Program, the Embassy encourages and supports teaching, faculty and doctoral research, conferences, and program activities that further the knowledge and understanding of Canada in the United States. There are more than fifty Canadian Studies programs across the country and roughly 500 U.S. universities and colleges that offer courses on Canada. More information on the Canadian Studies Grant Program is available at: <http://www.canadianembassy.org/education/canadianstudies-e.asp>. For a link to Canadian Studies programs in the U.S. see: <http://www.canadianembassy.org/education/us-e.asp>.
2. K-12 Outreach – The Embassy also provides support for K-12 outreach activities at several U.S. universities as well as the National Consortium for Teaching Canada (<http://www.uvm.edu/~canada/nctc>). In addition, the Embassy supports the Association for Canadian Studies in the United States (<http://www.acsus.org/>) and the American Council for Quebec Studies (<http://www.georgetown.edu/organizations/acqs/>) in their effort to broaden awareness of Canada among Americans.
3. Fulbright – The Canada-U.S. Fulbright Program, based in Ottawa, is a program of educational exchange between Canada and the United States. The aim of the program is to increase understanding between the two countries by providing scholarships and fellowships to Canadian and American faculty and graduate students to allow them to study, research and lecture in the other country.
